Market Commentary

The SCS/IPD Index reported a decline in capital values of -3.5% in Q2 and -5% for the first half of 2010. This decline brings the fall from the market peak in December 2007 to c 60%. With an income return at c 4% for the six months the total return for the market for H1 2010 is marginally negative at -1%. There is an expectation that Q3 will show a further decline in values of c 2%. While sentiment has improved the market is still suffering from illiquidity.

The retail environment remains challenging and many tenants continue to experience trading difficulties. Landlords are continuing to face issues such as tenant insolvencies, vacant premises and tenants seeking rent concessions. Vacancy levels in all high streets, shopping centre's and retail parks have increased significantly. There have been some signs recently of a pick up in retailer demand, with notable lettings including Forever 21 and New Look in the Jervis Shopping Centre and Skechers on Henry Street. Many landlords continue to seek short term occupiers, typically to cover outgoings with a relatively low level of rent payable, in the hope that better letting prospects will emerge in time.

We anticipate that some stability in rents will emerge in 2011 and yields will broadly continue to hold at current levels in the short to medium term particularly at the prime secure end with a small element of further yield slippage for less prime properties.
